Bishop Spencer Place Names Steve Seggerman Interim Chief Executive Officer

KANSAS CITY, Mo.: Bishop Spencer Place announces Steve Seggerman as the interim chief executive officer of the faith-based continuing care retirement community located in the Country Club Plaza. Seggerman is replacing Jean Bacon, who recently retired.

Seggerman joined Bishop Spencer Place in 2004 and has served five years as the community's chief financial officer. In his new position, he is responsible for managing the day-to-day operations of the community. "I look forward to serving all residents and employees to the best of my ability," said Seggerman.

"What we have at Bishop Spencer Place is a truly remarkable lifestyle located near all the upscale amenities of the Plaza. Now is a great time for seniors to be looking at their future retirement options, because everybody has questions," said Seggerman. "I look forward to working with seniors and their families so they can begin planning for their future needs."

Prior to joining the Bishop Spencer Place team, Seggerman spent ten years in public accounting, mainly with KPMG LLP in Kansas City, Mo. He received a master of business administration degree in finance from Rockhurst University in Kansas City, Mo., and an undergraduate degree in accounting from Iowa State University in Ames, Iowa.

Bishop Spencer Place, a non-profit community located at 4301 Madison Avenue and closely affiliated with the Episcopal Diocese of West Missouri and St. Luke's Hospital network of providers, provides active seniors with maintenance-free independent living in an engaging atmosphere, accented by a variety of residential options. Additionally, residents have access to a full continuum of quality health care, including assisted living and skilled nursing, if ever needed.
